LONDON, Aug. 2.—Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart said tonight that Anthony Bishop, a British diplomat expelled from the Soviet Union, had sent the personal papers of an acquaintance in the diplomatic bag, "a breach of our regulations."

Bishop and his wife arrived here from Moscow tonight.

Replying to a question in Parliament, Stewart went on to say "Any suggestion that he was a party to activities directed against the Soviet Union is entirely unfounded."

The Soviet Union had accused Bishop of conduct incompatible with his diplomatic status.

It was alleged at the trial of Gerald Brooke, a British teacher, that Bishop worked for an anti-Soviet emigre organization. Brooke was sentenced to five years internment last month for subversion.

The court found that he had Bishop's telephone number in his notebook. However, no evidence was produced to indicate that Brooke had tried to contact Bishop.
